The following case studies are entirely fictional but represent typical scenarios where TNIBF provides support.

Scenario 1: Family Experiencing Debt.

Julie, an administrative worker in the nuclear industry, fell into financial difficulty when her husband's pay stopped due to sickness. TNIBF referred the family to a free debt advice service, cleared their rent arrears, awarded them a short-term regular payment plus a number of one-off grants, giving them time to get back on their feet.

Scenario 2: Retired Widower.

Ex-nuclear worker Norman, was widowed and living alone in rented accommodation. Not yet in receipt of his state pension he was just about managing day-to-day financially.

However, when his washing machine broke down he had no savings. TNIBF representatives paid a visit to assess his needs. As a result of this it appeared that he also needed a new bed. He was given a grant for a replacement washing machine and a new bed. Once his state pension commenced Mr Brown became financially better off.

Scenario 3: Mobility Equipment

Patricia had worked in the nuclear industry many years ago. When, in retirement, the Local Authority was unable to assist with a specialist motor riser recliner chair for her disabled husband, TNIBF awarded a grant to enable the purchase of a chair to improve his quality of life.

How We Can Help

The Nuclear Industry Benevolent Fund (TNIBF) supports those working in or who have worked in the UK Nuclear Industry and their dependants.

When a challenging situation – whether personal or work related – becomes overwhelming, the impact can be devastating for the individual and their families.

TNIBF was established to provide financial support and guidance in such circumstances and can help in times of:

- Financial hardship
- Sickness
- Disability
- Old age
- Changes in family circumstances

We work closely with other charities and relevant organisations so we can signpost where necessary.

All enquiries are dealt with in the strictest confidence and with empathy and respect.
